Mining the Gold: Psychology & Alchemy

a lecture by Lara Newton

C.G. Jung saw his psychological work as similar to that of the solitary alchemist, striving both to liberate spirit from matter and to imbue the inert matter with spirit, a cyclical process in which the transformative experience of individuation comes to life. In this lecture, Lara Newton will present and explore the psychological dimensions that alchemical imagery opens to us. She will discuss the alchemical process and some of the major operations from a depth psychological perspective, always recognizing that the container for this process is our human experience of the ever-evolving movement between matter and spirit. Throughout the presentation, dreams will be used to amplify and elucidate the alchemical images and process.

Lara Newton, M.A., is a Senior Diplomate Jungian Analyst in private practice in Denver, Colorado. She is the Director of Training for the C.G. Jung Institute of Colorado and the President of the C.G. Jung Society of Colorado.

"The Alchemical Yellow in Dreams and Image"

An early 16th century alchemist said, "The yellow dawn is the end of night, and beginning of day, and a mother of the sun." To these medieval alchemists, color represented the phases of the long process of making gold - a metaphor for the individuation process and the changing nature of consciousness. The yellow, or citrinitas, is a transition, coming after the blackness of depression and chaos give way to the white of reflective consciousness and calmness. Jung points out that the black, white and red are discussed extensively in alchemical texts, yet the yellow, or fourth color, has fallen by the wayside. In her talk, Nancy invites you to move into your imagination and explore the experience of this abandoned fourth as manifested in dreams and image.

Nancy Ortenberg, M.A., LMFT is a Jungian analyst practicing in Boulder, Colorado with over 35 years of clinical experience. She is a graduate of the C.G.
